ONE-DAY FIGHT DECISION RESERVED

Justice Pierce Hears Arguments in Application for Injunction Against City.

The Olean street paving fight reached Supreme court in Buffalo Wednesday afternoon. Justice George E. Pierce reserved decision on application of Cornelius E. Mahaney for an injunction restraining Mayor George E. Pierce and members of the Olean council and Board of Aldermen from awarding a $187,000 contract to M. A. McCormick for paving North Union and West State streets.

Disregarding the question of materials, Justice Pierce voted opinion that the question hinged upon the legality of the resolution for the bond issue, which was passed by the council by Mr. Mahaney masked a move by the Warren Brothers company to get the job were made by Frank Andrews, city attorney of Olean.

Investigation into improper. The plaintiff was represented by Dana L. Jewell, attorney for the Warren Brothers company. Mayor Pierce was present, along with F. J. Schaffer, Jr. of the West State Street association, and J. W. Hastings, of counsel for the city.

Mr. Jewell attacked the council's decision to let the contract to the low bidder, McCormick, on the ground that a proper investigation of the method to be used was not made by the city authorities. He attacked the form of the bond issue resolution. On June 1, taxpayers voted for the asphalt-McCormick method—$83 for brick and there were 517 blank votes. Jewell contended that as only 100 blank votes were cast, the wishes of the majority were not fulfilled when the council voted the contract.

The council is prevented from signing the contract until Justice Pierce hands down his decision, but had voted to accept the McCormick bid before the action was started.

Paving Company Dispute. City Attorney Andrews said several paving companies are behind the dispute which has aroused considerable interest in Olean.

"Warren Brothers threatened" said Andrews, "they'd get an injunction unless they got the contract. Mahaney really represents Warren Brothers."

The Warren Brothers offered to pave the streets with a substance called "Warrenite." Justice Jewell said the McCormick sheeting method consists of covering the present brick paving with a coating of asphalt and would not be used unless the bid is accepted. Eleven bids were submitted.

Justice Pierce took briefs from both factions. He did not indicate when he would return a decision. The injunction, if granted, would prevent the case from being tried.

Mr. Schaffer of the West State Street association, told the court the street was badly in need of repair.
